

My main goal with this artwork was to fully capture the “retro pool party... in outer space” concept and integrate your latest round of feedback.

I envisioned a surreal, vibrant scene that feels alive and authentically 1950s through a vintage collage style. I wanted it to feel like an actual party, not just a static image.

That’s why updating the live band to match your real lineup (drummer, bass, guitar, and sax) was so important. It adds genuine energy and authenticity to the scene.

To keep things balanced, I removed the BBQ figure to declutter the foreground and added new alien guests, giving it that true cosmic celebration vibe.

The bubble helmets perfectly connect the 1950s pin-up look to the outer-space theme, while the UFO beam and distant pyramids add that surreal, ancient-meets-futuristic touch you wanted.

Finally, the entire scene glows under the “Midnight Sun,” tying all these weird, fun, and imaginative elements together into one cohesive, energetic world. This version uses the original clean font for a bold, straightforward title.

This version also captures the “retro pool party... in outer space” theme but leans fully into the 1950s sci-fi movie poster aesthetic.

It includes all the same key updates as Option 1: the new band lineup, alien guests, BBQ removal, and balanced scaling, but with a stronger focus on typography.

The main change here is the new stylized font, designed to feel straight out of a classic 1950s sci-fi film, just as you suggested. I also moved “PART 1” to the bottom right to give the title more breathing room and improve overall balance.

All the signature elements (the bubble helmets, UFO, pyramids, and alien guests) remain, illuminated by the “Midnight Sun.”

This new font really ties everything together, giving the artwork a bold, cinematic feel. I’m thrilled with how this version came together.
